

TACTICAL

Who is Tactical right for?

Tactical seat covers are built for people who spend their entire shift wearing gear. If you sit down with a duty belt, radio, holster, cuffs, or other hard-edged equipment on your hips or lower back, these covers are made for you.

Features + Specifications

- Duty belts and hard gear grind into the seatback every time you sit down, which is where factory seats usually fail first
- Reinforced seatback panels take the abuse instead of your upholstery
- Prevents early foam breakdown and torn seams caused by radios, holsters, cuffs, and tools
- Maintains a proper fit even with repeated in-and-out movement during long shifts
- Extends the life of fleet and patrol vehicle interiors, reducing replacement costs
- Keeps vehicles inspection-ready and professional-looking longer
- Designed specifically for working in uniform, not just commuting in work clothes

Pros + Cons

Pros

- Reinforced seatback specifically designed for duty belts, holsters, and tactical gear
- Reduced wear in high-friction areas where standard covers fail first
- Longer service life for both the seat cover and the factory seat underneath
- Maintains a tight, professional fit even with frequent in-and-out movement
- Ideal for law enforcement, security, corrections, or anyone wearing gear on their belt
- Available in both driver/passenger sets and driver's side only

Cons

- Slightly more expensive than standard Ironweave covers
- Overkill for drivers who don't wear duty belts or hard-edged gear regularly
